Adobe Acrobat Pro DC 2018.009.20044 Pre-Cracked - [CrackzSoft] New Version:.Q: Change scope on promise and return it I don't have any clue how to handle this. I have promise that gets data from server. After promise is resolved, I want to set options for newly loaded data that was already available during the promise. Promise.resolve(data).then(function() { data.isAwesome = true; data.isFantastic = true; return data; }); So after this promise is resolved I can't simply return data because it's undefined. Any suggestions? A: Your code does not make sense. Please try to expand the scope of your question and your problem. Promise.resolve() creates an immutable promise. It is resolved on the next tick. You can't change the data that was loaded by that promise. It was already in the cache. Once the promise is resolved you can use async/await instead of.then(). // create the promise await Promise.resolve(data); // do something with the data await data.isAwesome await data.isFantastic A: Promises are frozen when resolved. That is, you can't modify the initial resolved promise because that promise is immutable. You're creating a new promise, and the updated data inside that promise is not related to the initial data in any way. Instead, you should simply return the initial promise. Once it's resolved, you can set the data as you like. Promise.resolve(data).then(function() { data.isAwesome
