You will never feel easy if these chores, which are usually boring and annoying, are not performed in the right manner. Cleaners may create many different problems such as slowdowns, crashes or random reboots. Therefore, it is recommended to apply such PC maintenance tools only when you have time to do it, when your PC is calm and works in the best manner. In most of the cases, it is better to postpone such tasks until the next day, or to set a definite time for the task to be performed. If you feel that you have enough time to clean your PC, then let me give you some tips. You can start by cleaning your browsers first, since most of the cleaning apps automatically get rid of browser extensions. Firefox, Internet Explorer and Google Chrome are the most popular browsers among users. When cleaning browsers, you can simply clean all of your browser history by clicking the cleaning button at the bottom right of the toolbar. If you want to clean your browser's history in more detail, then it is recommended to use a separate cleaning tool. These programs, which are often included in cleaning software, allow you to find the exact address of the website which you visited and delete it with one click. Unfortunately, most cleaning apps do not offer a separate tool to clean log files. You can easily remove them from your system by using some cleaning software, but this is not always the best solution. If you want to remove logs, you will have to do it manually and delete them from the system manually. This can easily be achieved by using WinDirStat. What is more, you can set up a schedule for the task by using CleanMyPC, All Cleaner or CCleaner. When you schedule the task, CleanMyPC, All Cleaner or CCleaner will automatically remove all the data from your hard drive. This means that you can clean up your hard drive completely, or simply clean some files that you know that you do not need. If you wish to clean your PC
