More Info »The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for monitoring and/or controlling the operation of a gas turbine and is particularly concerned with the measurement of the temperature of a column of air entering the combustor of the turbine so that the air temperature in the combustor can be maintained at or above an optimum level. It is known to monitor the temperature of the stream of air entering the combustor of a gas turbine by diverting a portion of the air stream to a temperature sensor mounted in the gas turbine combustor. A signal from the sensor is fed back to a control system which controls the air flow to the combustor to maintain the combustor temperature at a predetermined level. However, it has been found that the temperature of the air entering the combustor can vary as a result of variations in the ambient temperature of the outside air and the aerodynamic effect on the air flowing through the gas turbine. The variation in the air temperature and the aerodynamic effect result in a variation of combustor temperature which although of small magnitude, has a detrimental effect on the performance of the gas turbine. This effect becomes pronounced when the turbine is operated intermittently.Q: Validate Google Sheets API Object I am using the Google Sheets API to gain access to a Google Sheet.  Done! Adding a full-time weekend crew and timing my own fishnets out of crocheted, knitted and retailed skeins of stretchy material were all on my list of things to do this year. My family and I were getting the place ready to host the University at the present time, which adds a whole new set of responsibilities to making all the guest suites along the way, then set most of my personal belongings throughout it to head down the river tomorrow to Calgary for the construction of the new and improved research vessel. Illness of small children and death of assorted Amityville-era residents dictated that Michael will not be out on the lake tomorrow, so that left my five siblings, two partners and three (soon to be four) daughters with nothing less than playing house with each other just like teenagers do. It sucked me out of my other much overdue effort of construction, and I had to turn in early and un-cheerfully, at 3AM. I miss my wife and our cute-anda-kinda-like-to-bitch-over-who-is-most-like-my-ex-mother-in-law Jessica baby. I will not be on the lake when she goes into labour. I will be on the next commute in.[Vaccination and reduced mortality among children in Colombia: is there a relationship?]. Chronic widespread diseases may influence the immunization coverage. This paper analyzed selected vaccination coverage among Colombian children and discussed the relationship of vaccination and disease occurrence in the country. The coverage for hepatitis B vaccines ranged from 74.5% to 94.7% in 2005 and the Human papiloma 16 vaccine (HPV) had a coverage of 36.2% in 2005. The study showed no correlation between vaccination coverage and deaths due to hepatitis B and HPV which might suggest a bias of low vaccination coverage among children in Colombia. The analysis of six recent deadly diseases showed an increase in the number of cases which accounts for population growth in Colombia. The study also suggested that for Colombia time to reach the bivalent serotype 2 and 4 target of 94.0% by 2006, for both hepatitis B and HPV vaccines, would be 10 years. 931 So.2d 1114 (2006) Jimmy BARNES, Appellant, v. Look for the pencil-shaded knots in a hedge maze. Look back at your hand mirror. And never stop looking. What You'll Find: Explore dark, lost spaces teeming with bloodstains and eerie old people. Unearth stories of New York's fabled fairy tales. Move through a world of whispering trees and a red sky. Know Your Mirror: What you see when you pick up your hand mirror isn't real, just a reflection of your mind. It's your perception at work, but it isn't your soul. And the mirror is just a piece of the story. Maze Out of Memory: This is what happens when you solve a maze without directions. You've outsmarted the hand mirror. You're caught in limbo. Prologue: An abandoned house. An old man is dying, sitting in an old chair in the corner of the room. He opens an envelope. Remember me? he asks. We are connected, he says. He opens a Bible and reads a passage. Flipping through a 1950s paperback, an English Village. A young woman sits on a rocking chair in the corner. Go ahead and turn the page. And say hello to me, she says. Cardboard boxes. A church. Old people and two children sing a hymn. I don't like this place. We're lost. Wait for me, Mary, says a man. Treehouse. You've just entered a treehouse. From above, you can see the rows of books on shelves. I don't like this place. We're lost, says a boy. Fast forward to a field with dogs. A woman screams. You've found the body. It's a madhouse. The inmates are always raging. You can never tell who's going to bite off your head. Space. You're falling through space. You discover an old man in a glass box. I don't like this place. We're lost, says a woman. Your hand breaks. You see a ghost in the mirror. By the end of Looking Glass, your hand mirror will be completely broken. There's no map, so you'll never know the whole truth, just glimpses of it as you explore. Looking Glass is a
